	Traditional	Checkr
Collecting information	Applicant information is collected manually and often re-entered into multiple systems	Candidates are invited to enter their own information directly into Checkr's online dashboard
	Sensitive personally identifiable information (PII) is unnecessarily collected, managed, and stored by HR	Reduces risks associated with collecting and managing PII
Identity verification	CRA looks for an exact match to verify identity	Data is enriched and verified with cross-correlation of PII from all available sources
	Identity mismatches are sent back to customer to rework manually	Checkr resolves remaining data entry errors directly with the applicant
Database searches	Dependencies between systems and teams cause delays in initiation of search	Multi-threaded searches return results almost instantly, 24/7
	Processes are often single-threaded and serialized, which take more time to complete	Modern and direct connections have been built with all necessary data providers
Court research	Human-powered teams review results from database searches and initiate requests for county searches as necessary	County searches are triggered instantly and automatically based on results from database searches
	Network of court researchers has a single tier, leading to delays based on fluctuation in volume	Real-time monitoring of multi-tiered court researcher network to optimize for speed
